

Attorney Fees

In re McDowell Case No. 389-31843-H13

3-2-90 HLH Not Published

The court denied an application for additional attorney fees on the ground the application was rife with errors and sought unreasonable compensation given the lack of complexity of the case.

1 services through the date of confirmation should exceed that 2 median figure.

3 At the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed the firm
4 also filed a disclosure statement showing that it had received
5 on its fees $425 and that its agreement with the debtors called 6 for additional fees of $600. The order of confirmation
7 submitted to the court by the firm called for approval of fees
8 of $1,025 with $425 paid and a balance remaining of $600.

9 The Supplemental Petition shows receipt of the first 10 $1,025 and requests, in addition, fees of $1,177 plus costs of 11 $16.90. If granted the total attorney fees would amount to 12 $2,202. However, an examination of the time records shows the 13 total fees and costs in the case amounted to only $1,193.90.

14 Attached to the Supplemental Petition are copies of time
15 records starting with "Preparation of draft Chapter 13 Papers"
16 on 4/13/89 and ending with "Preparation of Letter to client re:
17 modified Chapter 13 Plan" on 12/08/89. It shows work by Don 18 Thacker, attorney, Zina Nichols, whom the court assumes is a 19 paralegal, and by Kyle Walker and Tricia Kawders, whom the 20 court assumes are secretaries. The time spent by each is 21 multiplied by the hourly rate charged by each to obtain a total
22 in fees of $1,177. No documents have been filed with the court 23 subsequent to 11/15/89 other than the Supplemental Petition for 24 fees and an affidavit in support. It therefore appears that 25 the time sheets cover all of the legal services performed by 26 the firm. If the firm is entitled to $1,177 in compensation

1 and $16.90 for costs advanced totalling $1,193.90 for all its 2 services and has received $1,025, it would be entitled to a
3 balance of $168.90 not $1,193.90.

4 This court has cautioned this firm in several past cases
5 that the court should not be required to examine petitions for 6 attorneys submitted by the firm to locate errors. The fee
7 applications should be accurate. The errors in this case are 8 egregious. Based on the firm's own time sheets and its own 9 rates of compensation, (without any examination by the court as 10 to whether the time spent was reasonably necessary or whether 11 hourly rates are appropriate) it is obvious the debtors were 12 grossly overcharged. The court believes it is not an answer
13 to merely correct the errors and award the correct balance.
14 Rather, since the attorneys have requested $1,193.90 but are 15 entitled only to $168.90 based upon their own records, the 16 court believes it is appropriate to deny any additional fees.
17 The next time this occurs the court will, in addition to 18 denying the request for fees, consider the imposition of 19 sanctions such as requiring the firm to disgorge fees already 20 received.

21 Because this court has had continual problems regarding 22 the fees charged by this firm, the court will, in future cases 23 in which the fees sought at the time of confirmation exceed 24 $725, require the firm not only to supply the court with a copy 25 of its time sheets but to supply a written narrative of 26 explanations of what unique features of the case indicate the

1 fee should be greater than the median charged by other firms.
